Title: The Thirsty Crow

It was a hot summer day. A thirsty crow flew into a village in search of water. The crow flew over the houses, fields, and trees but it didn't find any water. After a long time, it came across a farm, under one of the trees found a pot of water.

The crow swooped down to the tree, then down to the ground happily as it finally found a pot of water. It quickly moved towards the pot and looked inside. There was very little water in the pot. The crow put his beak inside the pot but could not reach the water to drink. The level of the water was too low, and the narrow opening prevented its neck from going all the way down.

It tried to overturn the pot to let the water out, but the pot was too heavy. The crow was disappointed. It was very thirsty and needed to drink the water badly. It could have given up and flown to another farm, looking for water.

But it didn't. Instead, it looked around and thought, "What else can I do?" The crow saw some pebbles in the farm and he had an idea! The crow collected few pebbles and put them in the pot slowly and gradually. As it added more and more pebbles, the water level came up to the brim.

The crow drank the water to its heart's content and flew back home happily!
